THE BUTTON OF LOVE AND
THE LITTLE PRINCE
WHO IS NOT
LITTLE ANYMORE

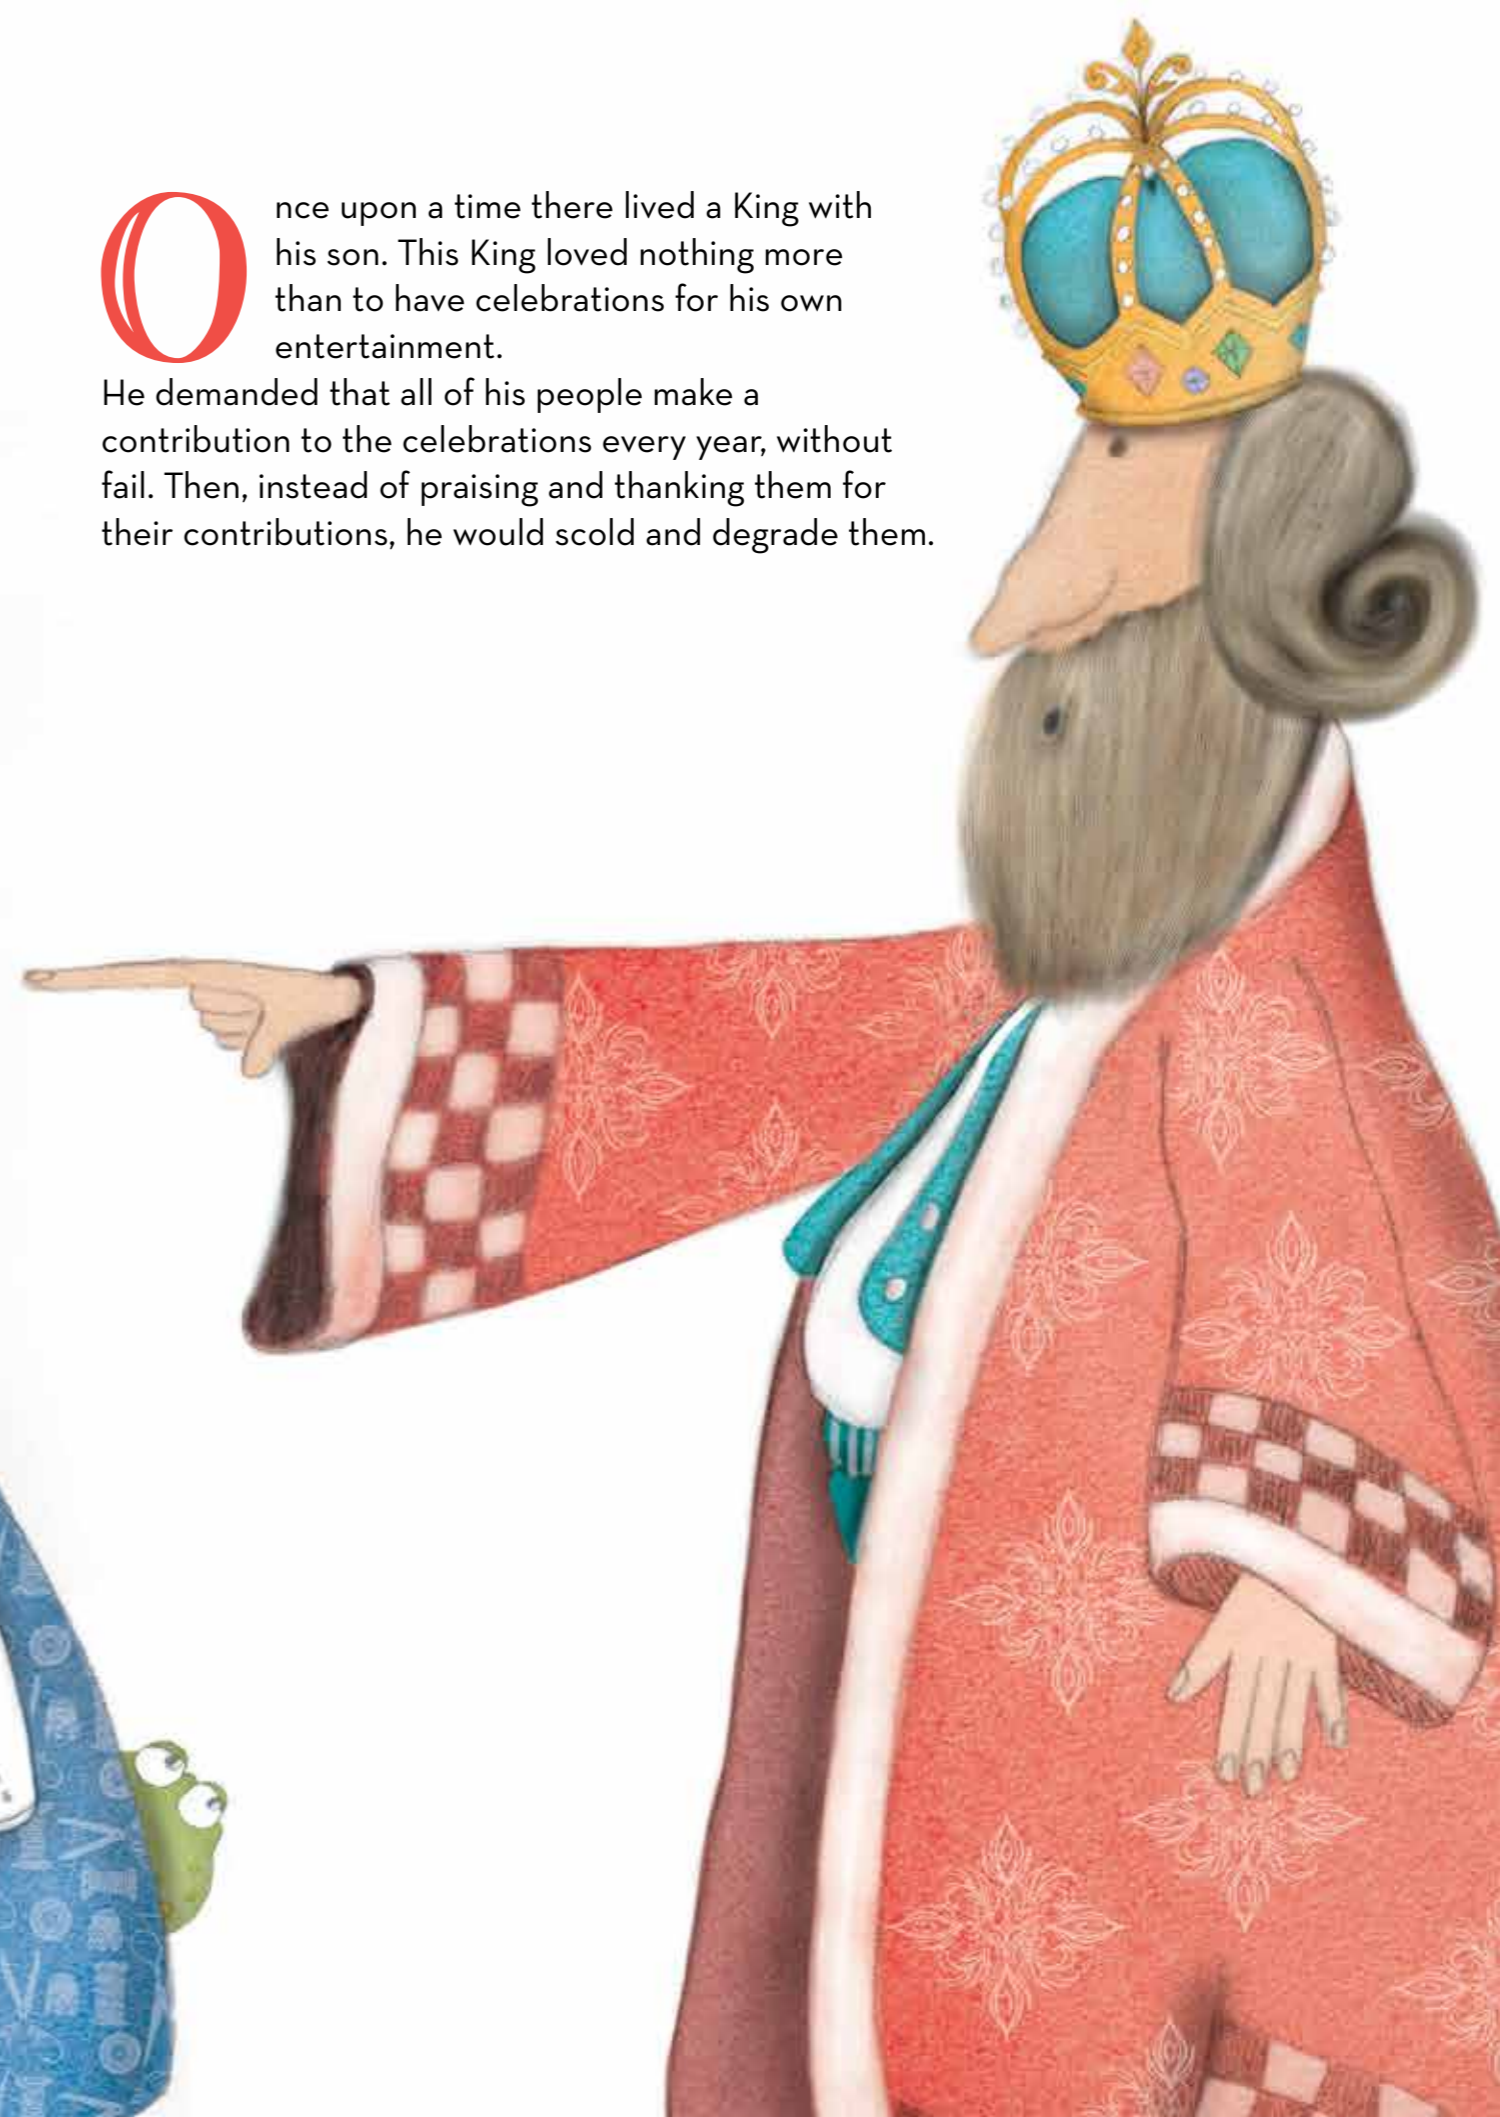

illustrated by Kelly Matathia Covo

Once upon a time there lived a King with his son. This King loved nothing more than to have celebrations for his own entertainment.

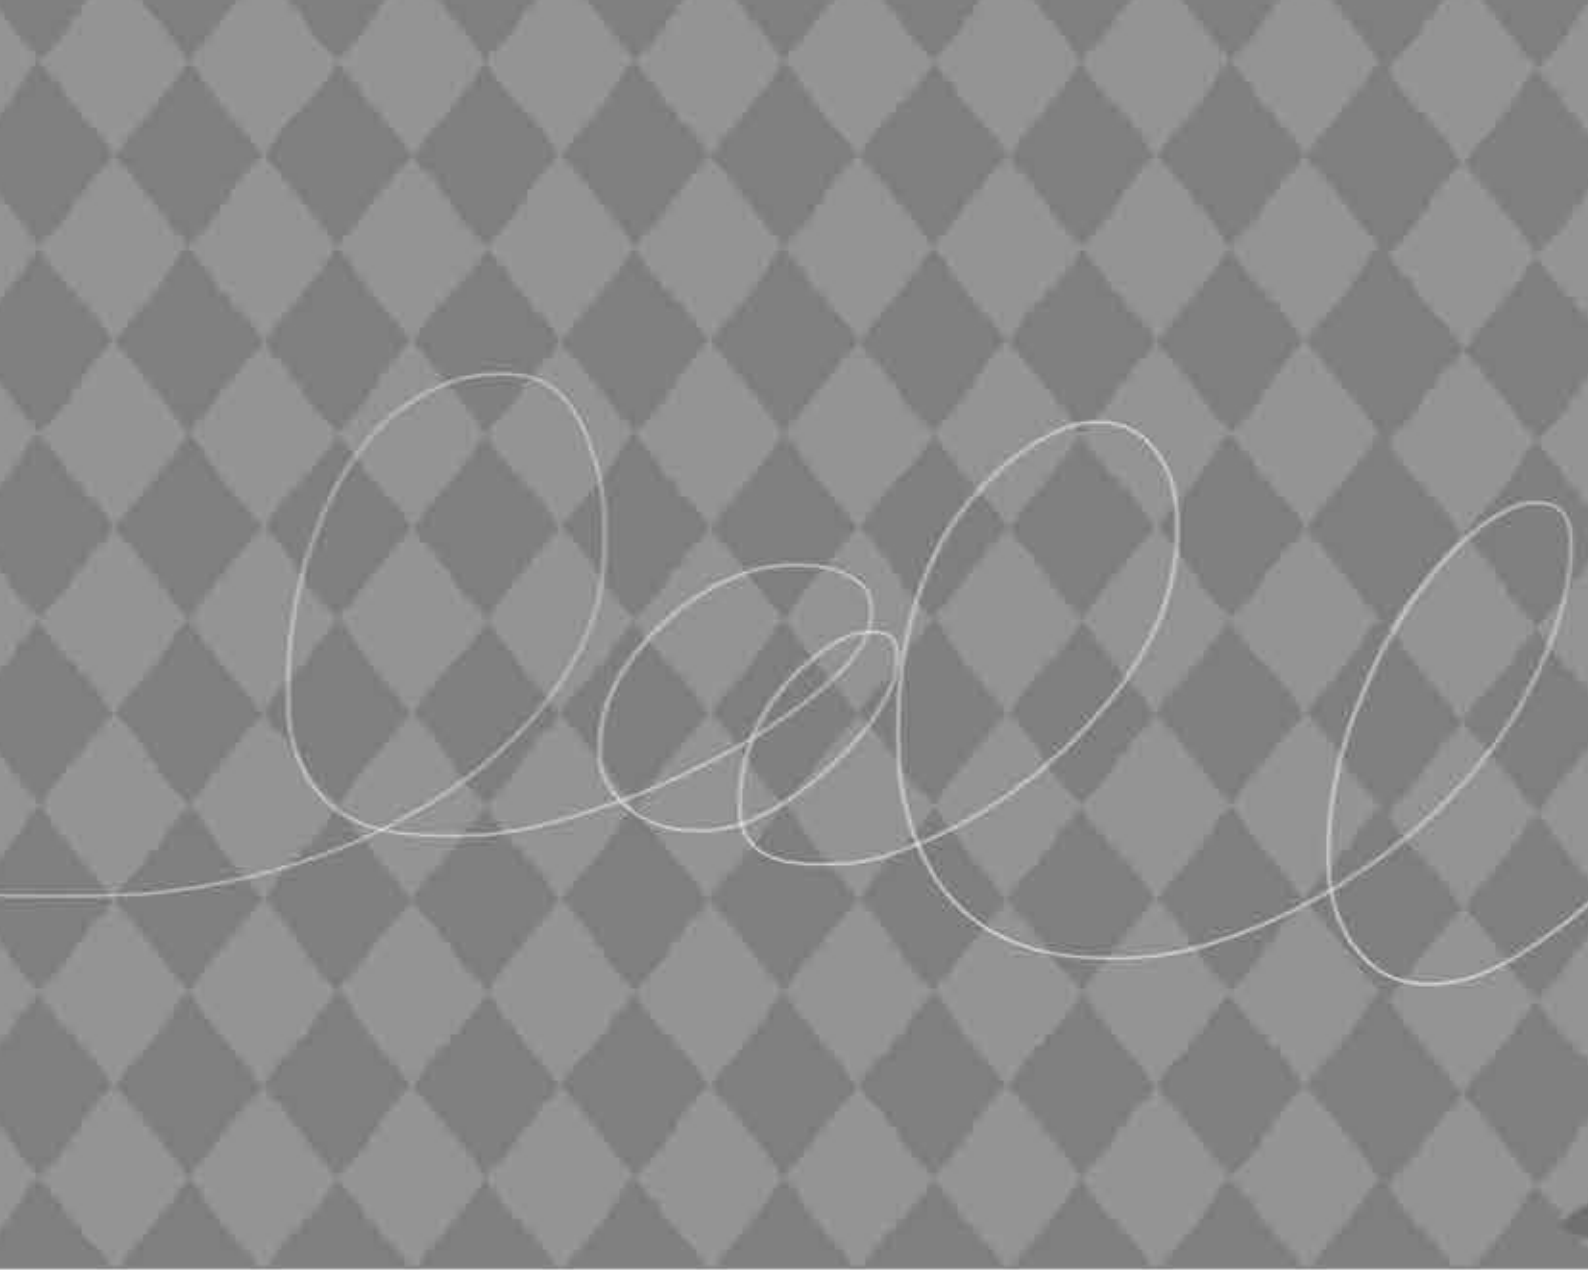

He demanded that all of his people make a contribution to the celebrations every year, without fail. Then, instead of praising and thanking them for their contributions, he would scold and degrade them.

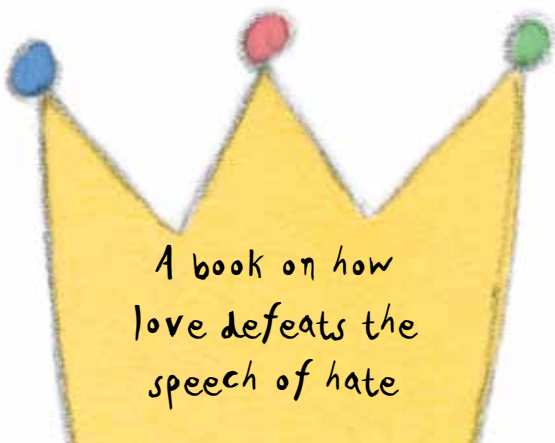

Everyone still remembers the year he commanded them to bring ice from the mountains and dress up in black and white.

«You'll remember your roots. You're descended from the other side of the Earth, aren't you?» he had told them. The entire palace had been transformed into the South Pole, and the people paraded around as penguins.

Can a single button, when gifted with love, change the course of an entire kingdom, whose King insulted and degraded his own people, tearing them apart? The answer is yes, when the King's son, the Prince who is no longer young, decides to take matters into his own hands and prove the value of love, a value which no amount of gold or silver jewels in the world could ever compare to.
